About the event

About the event

Norway is recognised for its relatively low levels of corruption, supported by established institutions, transparent governance practices, and an emphasis on accountability in public administration. This event seeks to share those experiences with Thai counterparts, fostering mutual learning and cooperation.

Integrity in Practice Forum aims to facilitate dialogue and knowledge exchange between Thailand's public sector, private sector, and academia, drawing on Norwegian and Thai experiences in promoting integrity and responsible governance. The event will explore how institutions, businesses, and educational organisations integrate anti-corruption principles into governance structures, corporate culture, and academic curricula, ensuring integrity is embedded in future leadership. The event will also connect the practices to the World Bank Business Ready framework (B-READY) as well as the OECD's Anti-Corruption and Integrity Framework to highlight how transparency and strong governance frameworks support a predictable and resilient business climate.
